There is life after school!

It's hard to believe that this time last month I was taking my final exams. Unlike most of my friends, I decided not to go away but instead I've started helping out at the local homeless shelter. It's not full-time but I do go there every day. I'm really enjoying myself and I know that this will also look good when I apply for university or a job. Kylie

I've decided to go travelling for a few months. I'm not going to go to university until next year and I'll be spending the rest of my life working, so why not go and have fun now? My parents aren't too pleased because they think I should earn some money, but I intend to do that while I'm on the road. Rob

I've always wanted to be a vet, so I'm going to spend the summer doing work experience at the local surgery. It won't be paid but I think that I'll learn a lot and it will help me when I start my studies. With any luck I might be able to work there during the holidays! Matthew

It's really hard to know what to do. I mean, university isn't for everyone and not everyone wants to go travelling! So I've set up a blog with information about all the opportunities that are out there. I'm writing it for people like me and I hope that it'll be useful. I want to be a writer, so I'm sure it'll help me. Sally

I love the idea of not knowing what's round the next corner. My parents want me to study law as they're both lawyers but I know it wouldn't be the right thing for me. They've never taken risks and have always followed the sensible career path, so I think they're finding it very hard to understand me. Deborah
